Sept. 24-26, 2010

Here in Anchorage for the first time is a District Wide retreat sponsored by the National Women of Grace

Dr. Christy Hill has a passion for spiritual formation. She felt a call in high school to be available for God to use her in forming the spiritual lives of people wherever He saw fit. The quest to be trained for this calling took her to study Christian Education at Wheaton College and Talbot School of Theology, eventually getting her PhD in Educational Studies. Her studies have always had a personal dimension to them, though, spurring her on in her own development through these spiritual communities. God has developed her compassion for people and her ministry skills along the way, as well, by putting her in various settings outside her comfort zone. These include working with underprivileged families in Mexico, hanging out with and discipling Jr. High students and adult singles in CA and equipping women for ministry in the local church. Even her newest role as wife and life partner to Jim Hill (as of July 13th 2008) it continues to be part of her context for how God is spiritually forming her. She currently teaches undergraduate and graduate students in the School of Ministry Studies at Grace College and Seminary.
